

RORC Caribbean 600: Gone in 61 seconds - Class40 division winner decided by Louay Habib 25 Feb 05:36 UTC

25 February 2022

A dramatic finish between two Class40 teams saw Finimmo take the lead from Guidi in the last few miles of the race to win by just 61 seconds - RORC Caribbean 600 © Tim Wright / photoaction.com

The winner of the nine-strong Class40 division was decided on the fourth day of the RORC Caribbean 600 with a dramatic finish between two teams. Charles-Louis Mourruau's Guidi (FRA), which had led for most of the race, stalled as the breeze faded with the finish line beckoning. Finimmo took the lead in the last few miles to win by just 61 seconds after racing for well over three days and nights. The spirit in the Class40 division shone through with the Finimmo team going to greet Guidi into English Harbour, consoling their adversaries.

The Owen Clarke designed Finimmo was sailed by a team of four co-skippers; Herve Thomas, Benoit de Froidmont, Gerald Veniard and four-time Vendée Globe sailor Kito de Pavant. Figarist Gerald Veniard, taking part in his second race, spoke on behalf of the team:

Charles-Louis Mourruau's Class40 Guidi approaching the finish line - RORC Caribbean 600 ©Tim Wright / photoaction.com

Charles-Louis Mourruau was joined by Andrea Fantini and Mikael Ryking for the race on Class40 Guidi - RORC Caribbean 600 ©Mags Hudgell

The Owen Clarke designed Finimmo was sailed by a team of four co-skippers; Herve Thomas, Benoit de Froidmont, Gerald Veniard and four-time Vendée Globe sailor Kito de Pavant - RORC Caribbean 600 - photo © Tim Wright / Photoaction.com

"Our goal was to finish in the top three. We had a good start and were the first Class40 at Barbuda, but then Guidi came back and smashed us downwind. We got back at them at St Maarten but then they extended on the downwind leg to Guadeloupe. Our strategy for Guadeloupe did not work at all. After that we were 20 miles behind and we thought the race was lost. It was a big surprise to see Guidi was offshore and now had wind after Redonda. So, it was like the icing on the cake to take the lead after a match race to the finish."

The Sam Manuard designed Mach40.3 Guidi was sailed by a team of three. Charles-Louis Mourruau was taking part in his third race and was joined by Andrea Fantini and Mikael Ryking.

"Myself and Andrea Fantini just did the Transat Jacques Vabre and we had shifty conditions, so we kind of knew what to expect, but we didn't expect there to be so little wind after Redonda, that was really brutal," commented Charles-Louis Mourruau. "Finimmo sailed an amazing race. The boat used to be called Hydra and we were joking that every time they came back at us it was like chopping off one of the heads! I am happy for them because they fought really hard. Although Guidi is a more modern boat, Finimmo is a little narrower with a big code zero, so very quick in the light. We were very unlucky at the end, but that is sailing, isn't it?"

Charles-Louis Mourruau was joined by Andrea Fantini and Mikael Ryking for the race on Class40 Guidi - RORC Caribbean 600 - photo © Mags Hudgell

Follow the RORC Caribbean 600 on social media and via the dedicated race website: caribbean600.rorc.org

Track the remainder of the fleet still out on the race course and follow all the updates as the race unfolds: caribbean600.rorc.org/Tracking/2022-fleet-tracking.html

Full Race Results available here.